

Trailer Park Boys are Canada's most beloved miscreants from a small town in Nova Scotia, Canada. Robb Wells (Ricky), John Paul Tremblay (Julian) and Bubbles (Mike Smith) have created loyal and loveable characters on their television series and their message has spread globally. Over the past 18 years "The Boys" have garnered much press and gained a hardcore following of fans.

Originally, the concept of Trailer Park Boys began as a short film starring John Paul Tremblay and Robb Wells, which debuted to rave reviews at the 1999 Atlantic Film Festival. The premise: a camera crew chronicles the boys' adventures living in the Sunnyvale Trailer Park in Dartmouth, Nova Scotia. 11 seasons, three feature films and multiple live specials later, the camera crew continues to follow Bubbles, Ricky and Julian. In 2016, Netflix released an 8-part special, Trailer Park Boys Out of the Park: Europe, following their adventures in London, Berlin, Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm, Helsinki and Amsterdam.

The brand has escalated to new heights when Netflix picked up the television series starting with Season 8. 2015 saw the launch of the Trailer Park Boys podcast on iTunes, where it was nominated for the Best Of iTunes and had over 1.2 million downloads. Live tours continue to sell out across North America, Europe, New Zealand and Australia. In October 2016, The Boys released a new special for Netflix entitled "Out Of The Park Europe," which chronicled their adventures throughout London, Berlin, Copenhagen, Oslo, Stockholm, Helsinki and Amsterdam.

Alongside this success, Wells, Tremblay and Smith launched Swearnet.com - their uncensored online comedy network. Fans include Jimmy Kimmel, Snoop Dogg (who makes an appearance in Season 10), Axl Rose, Billy Bob Thornton, Noel Fielding, Verne Troyner, Rival Sons and Rush.

Trailer Park Boys are here to stay and we can't wait to see what else is in store...
